If you could create a new law for America, what would it be? Take time to develop your ideas, give your new law a title, write your argument to persuade Congress to pass your proposal, and give it orally to your family or friends. You may want to make a motion to “adjourn” so that members are able to take time to consider your new law. When you reconvene, be sure to ask for a “roll call vote” so that each member will be recognized by name for his vote.
